Blog Post #1:

Tiny homes have surged in popularity and are now widely available as a unique vacation rental option. The tiny house movement has been fueled by those looking to save money on housing, leave a smaller environmental footprint, or want an off-the-grid lifestyle.

Tiny homes are trendy, and tiny home vacation rentals can be found all over the country. No more than 400 square feet in size, a tiny house can still be big on luxury. If you are looking for a unique vacation experience, check into all the benefits of a tiny home. A tiny home can provide all the benefits of a full-size home. Features are carefully, thoughtfully, and creatively packed into a smaller space. Whether you are looking for a romantic getaway, an author's retreat, or your next big adventure, a tiny home vacation can provide you with big luxury, in a small space.

Tiny homes are unique, cozy, eco-friendly, and very diverse in style. A tiny house is small in space, but often full of built-in creativity, and innovation. Check out these two Joshua Tree tiny houses available for vacation rentals.

The Joshua Tree House

Nope, the Joshua Tree House isn't in California. It's a treehouse vacation rental in Virginia.

Located just 100 hundred feet away from the North River, the host provides two kayaks and a canoe to guests. You'll find a cozy fireplace, full kitchen, stunning walnut spiral staircase, and a cozy queen-size bed, all nestled in the pines outside Bridgewater, Virginia.
